

Shamokin Dam Borough - Elevated Water Tank Rehabilitation Project

The Shamokin Dam Borough elevated water tank, located at the interchange to Sunbury, will be undergoing a full rehabilitation, inside and out, as part of required maintenance. The tank was put into service in 2001 and has had periodic inspections and general maintenance up to this time.

For this project the tank will be out of service for approximately six (6) weeks, beginning July 13th. During that out of service time we will be relying on our main reservoir to supply the Borough with water. The following are some items pertaining to the project.

Our water storage capacity (reserves) will drop by approximately 25% during the rehabilitation. We will keep our reserves as high as possible throughout the entire project. Water conservation would be greatly appreciated and recommended throughout the project.

Customers may notice pressure fluctuation, differences in taste and odor, and slight discoloration in their water, primarily in the beginning of the project, due to the source change from the elevated tank to the main reservoir. These issues are normal in this type of operational change.

Extremes to the above noted items should be reported to the Borough Office as soon as possible.
